

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

Through no fault of their own, macronations have accumulated too large of territories and populations to stay in close contact with their citizens. Instead they are becoming more and more impersonal in their governance. Therefore, the Beatus Cras has chosen to remove itself from such impersonality and create a micronation inside the macronation where it currently resides (the United States of America). Taking into account the weight of such an action, the incipient council have taken upon themselves the responsibility to create a new nation in which every individual can be heard distinctly.

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary to tone it down a little.
